

Matthew Rinehart, DPT

Matthew earned his Doctor of Physical Therapy and Bachelor of Science in Health Science from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. His clinical training includes full-time rotations in rural and tribal health, pediatrics, acute care, inpatient rehabilitation, post-op rehabilitation, outpatient orthopedics, and complex wound care. Matthew also worked with the American Physical Therapy Association's Government Affairs Unit at its headquarters in Virginia, contributing to national policy initiatives aimed at improving health care for both providers and patients.

A former NCAA collegiate football athlete, Matthew maintains a strong interest in strength training and performance-based rehabilitation. He pairs this perspective with a belief that optimal physical therapy means understanding the whole person and their unique human experience—not just the injury—when designing an individualized treatment plan. His goal is to facilitate independence in managing health and wellness across the lifespan.
